With regard to population growth and food shortages, the conservation and maintenance of food products has been widely considered, and the importance of preventing food waste and prolonging their time is increasing due to the growth of exports and the emergence of more stable markets.

The drying and powdering method in food industry is one of the best and oldest methods of food preservation. In this method, the cost of treatment is less than other methods and after maintenance, maintenance of the products does not need refrigerating and cold storage facilities, etc. And the products are in proper storage capacity. One of the priorities of the dry method and powdering of the fruit is the reduction of the weight and volume of the products in comparison with other methods, which is very costly in transporting and transportation issues and in the area of the occupied volume of warehouses. Increasing their shelf life by reducing their aquatic activity and reducing their microbial growth is another advantage of these products. These products are packaged as soft powder in bags of polyethylene 1 and 5 kilos.
